The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York line been engaged in a series of inquiries in relation to the comparative mortality of different classes or sationalities of people in the climate of New Orleans. The physician of the Company, himself a resident of New Orleans, respects that this varies from 2½ to 329 in a thousand—the unities of the city and the adjacent parts of Louisiana being in the lowest, and emigrants from Holland and Belgium in the highest class. Of Dimoisses and Indianians, 44 out of every 1,000 die annually, when they venture into that locality; but the average mor-
